Resumé

Emma Nohrén is the Green Party's spokesperson for Rural Affairs. She was elected deputy member of the Committee on Environment and Agriculture and of the Committee on foreign affairs after the 2014 parliamentary elections. Her main focus areas are rural development, limnic and marine water issues, fisheries, chemicals and gene technology, hunting and game management. She is a member of the Green Party's political executive board and the head of the Greens environment team in the Swedish Riksdag. She is also a Swedish delegate in the European Green Party.

Before Emma Nohrén was elected to the Riksdag, she was involved in local politics in her home municipality, Lysekil, on the Swedish west coast. She was a councillor and representative on the Social Services Committee of Lysekil Council. She was also a lay judge in the District Court of Uddevalla.

Over the years, Emma Nohrén has held many positions in her party, including the role of spokesperson for the party locally, member of the executive committee of the party at county level and member of the National Executive. She has also been involved in the Swedish Society for Nature Conservation and was Chair in her county branch for two years and in the municipal branch for four years.

Emma Nohrén holds a Master of Science degree with a major in Marine Ecology. She has also conducted PhD studies. She has studied shallow marine ecosystems and the anthropogenic foot prints in these areas. She has taught courses in Ecology and Fisheries at the University of Gothenburg and is passionate about making science, especially marine science, accessible to a broader audience. During her years as the head of Havets Hus, a public aquarium showcasing native marine wild life, she was able to combine her interest in the ocean and environmental issues with teaching and outreach activities.
