Title: White Paper Revolution: Solidarity with the Chinese Protesters

Tabled by: Federation of Young European Greens

Resolution text

1 Over the weekend of 26th November 2022, mass civil unrest and protests erupted
2 throughout the People’s Republic of China (hereinafter China) across 15 cities, 3 largely coordinated by students from more than 50 university campuses.

4 The protests began as demonstrations against China’s ‘zero-COVID’ policy, but 5 many have grown into overall dissent of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP)’s 6 administration and particularly of CCP General Secretary Xi Jinping – with 7 expressions of anger over oppression and repression by the state, and calls for 8 democracy, freedom and human rights, or even the resignation of Xi Jinping or an 9 end to CCP rule.

10 Blank sheets of paper have become a symbol of the protests, as students have 11 used it to represent the CCP’s restrictions on speech. Mass civil unrest and 12 protests in China to this degree amounts to one of the most widespread 13 expressions of dissent since the 1989 Tiananmen Square massacre.

14 The CCP’s response since has, expectedly, been a crackdown of protests and 15 suppression of (online) speech. Police units and metal barricades have been set 16 up in various cities, and police have been recorded abusing and arresting 17 protesters and journalists on Sunday, November 27th, in Shanghai, including two 18 foreign reporters. Mentions of the protests and the word ‘white paper’ and 19 videos of such abuses continue to be wiped from the Chinese internet.

20 At such a crucial and monumental juncture in time, where such dissent aimed at 21 the CCP and its leader Xi Jinping is unprecedented, governments of the Western 22 world cannot again choose to remain silent. The European Union and the 23 governments of Europe must do more to rebuke China and hold Xi Jinping and his 24 administration accountable for their actions. As the protests and CCP 25 retaliation escalate, President of the European Council Charles Michel is, at 26 the time of writing, still scheduled to fly out to Beijing on December 1st to 27 meet with Xi Jinping in an effort to strengthen ties between Brussels and 28 Beijing.

29 The European Green Party therefore expresses its grave concern, as it has in the 30 past, of China's suppression of fundamental rights, its continuous human rights 31 abuses, its breaches of international law, and its crimes against humanity. We 32 watch closely the developments of these protests and the response of the CCP, 33 condemning of the increasing escalation of force used by the Chinese police and 34 mass censorship and suppression of speech and freedom of press. We strongly 35 reaffirm our demands made in the resolution adopted at the 33rd EGP Council –
36 that the EU and national governments of Europe must actively pursue a common 37 policy vis-à-vis China that is guided by upholding human rights and defending 38 international rule of law.

39 With regards to all of the above, reaffirming the resolution on EU's China 40 policy adopted at the 33rd EGP Council and in light of the further escalation of 41 these protests, the European Green Party repeats all of the demands expressed in 42 the previous resolution, and expresses our full solidarity with the protesters
43 and unequivocal support for their fundamental rights and freedoms. We call upon 44 the EU and national governments of the Europe to:

- 45 • Express their undivided support and solidarity for the protesters in China 46 and those protesting abroad;
- 47 • Condemn in the strongest terms the crackdown of the CCP administration 48 against the protesters and the suppression of their fundamental right to 49 free speech and assembly;
- 50 • Exert pressure on the CCP administration to comply with the UN Charter and 51 international human rights laws and standards as well as to condition 52 future relations and agreements made with China on compliance with such 53 norms, including for example the continued freezing of the EU-China

54 investment deal;

- 55 • Consider, in light of further retaliation against and crackdown on these 56 protesters by the CCP, the implementation of new sanctions, including 57 targeted sanctions of Chinese officials and entities responsible for or 58 directly associated with the crackdowns and other affiliated human rights 59 violations;

- 60 • Offer asylum to Chinese activists, citizens, dissidents and individuals
61 targeted by the Chinese state living abroad, and issue humanitarian visas
62 to facilitate the travel of said Chinese individuals to European borders;

- 63 • Guarantee the same degree of protection to Chinese activists, citizens, 64 dissidents and individuals targeted by the Chinese state living in 65 European territories as a European citizen would have, including the 66 suspension of operations of Chinese police overseas service stations
67 within territories of European states pending investigations into these 68 stations of allegations of intimidation and persecution of Chinese 69 individuals;

- 70 • Demand Chinese authorities to stop the intimidation, persecution and abuse 71 of protesters and journalists, to respond to protests in line with 72 international human rights laws and standards, and to release immediately
73 and unconditionally all political prisoners, including human rights
74 defenders, dissidents, activists, journalists, and academics;

- 75 • Support in all ways possible the limited democratic civil society
76 available in or operating in China, including human rights organisations
77 and groups, civil society organisations, civil defenders and advocates,
78 and journalists. This includes resources and assistance in the monitoring 79 of state censorship, repression and oppression in light of these 80 crackdowns, professional and legal support, and financial aid;

- 81 • Facilitate free access to the Internet and the flow of and access to 82 information where possible, such as through the facilitation of Virtual 83 Private Networks (VPNs) to bypass the Chinese 'firewall', as well as the 84 facilitation of the production and dissemination of non-CCP-affiliated 85 media via the support of independent Chinese and foreign journalists on 86 the ground in China and pressure on the CCP against their further persecution;

- Push for the international condemnation of the human rights abuses and state suppression and oppression of the CCP via our democratic partners generally and specifically via the General Assembly and/or Human Rights Council of the UN;
- In accordance with the above and anticipating further retaliation and crackdown by the CCP of these protesters, to call for the creation of an independent evidence gathering mechanism with functions similar to those of the International, Impartial and Independent Mechanism (IIIM) for Syria via either the UN General Assembly or Human Rights Council in order to investigate human rights violations committed by the CCP against Chinese citizens, and to assist in any way feasible the coordination of such investigations.

Background

What began as a resistance to the government’s ‘zero-COVID’ policy grew in strength and reached a tipping point after a fire broke out in a residential high-rise in Ürümqi of the Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region (hereinafter Xinjiang), leading to the death of ten people, as residents were not allowed to leave the building and firefighters were delayed from reaching the residents.

There is no doubt. Reiterating our previous resolution on China adopted at the 33rd EGP Council, the CCP is an authoritarian regime. Its ‘zero-COVID’ policy, the ruthlessness with which is its enforced and violent suppression of critical opinion is but the latest thread in a pattern over the past decades of sweeping crackdowns and censorship of dissent, free speech, and freedom of press, of erasure and destruction of civil society, and of the ethnic oppression of the Uyghurs, Tibetans, the Mongols, the Hui and others. State oppression and repression has only continually increased both internally, especially in Xinjiang and Tibet, and externally in Hong Kong and Taiwan. The CCP’s brutalities against activists, dissidents and individuals targeted by the Chinese state include reports of the routine use of torture, forced disappearances, a lack of rule of law and separation of powers with politically controlled courts, and the excessive use of - often politically motivated - death sentences.

Therefore, it is especially notable that these protests have erupted out of Xinjiang, where the mass surveillance state is significantly more expansive than the rest of China. Furthermore, it is where the CCP is reportedly committing crimes against humanity in the region, as assessed in the report by the office of UN high commissioner for human rights Michelle Bachelet, published August 31st and likewise concluded by the European Parliament, which added that there is a high risk of genocide. This includes the ethnic cleansing, and forced internment, sterilisation, 're-education' (noting that 're-education' is the brainwashing through violence, dehumanisation and torture), and exploitation of up to 2 million Uyghurs and other ethnic minorities. However, the CCP has not been formally investigated on this, after such a measure was shot down by China and its allies in the UN Human Rights Council. The report from commissioner Bachelet was not a full investigation, as the UN was never allowed proper access.
